Unfortunately Tom's is making very few parts for the SW20 MR2 now even though many of their parts have come in to great demand amongst the global community of MR2 enthusiasts. Many of the other Japanese performance parts companies took inspiration from Tom's in developing upgrades for the SW20, such as the success of the Tom's Racing T020 catalog.

Tom's Racing appears to have focused mainly on the 3sge engine, possibly for a naturally aspirated racing series, but also probably because the 3sge had been used in racing development for several years before the 3sgte became popular. The weblink catalog I found does not reference any upgrades for the 3sgte, however there has been Tom's MR2 turbochargers turn up for sale on Ebay, so possibly at one time there were upgrades available. The Tom's ECU is available for N/A and Turbo variants.

Tom's 2.2 Stroker 3sge - full engine! claiming over 200hp in an NA this is one serious 4

Unfortunately, there are few factory pictures of the Tom's body kit remaining. It seems that at present, the rear bumper is the most coveted of all body kit parts, however Tom's had some other interesting additions including the Tail light louvres, Tail light mesh, and Intake Scoop (with accompanying air box). The Internet is rife with manufacturers offering 'replica' style kit pieces, for the serious collector, it is necessary to keep a watchful eye on the 'buy and sell' of MR2 forums and also religiously trawl through Yahoo auctions Japan.

Genuine Tom's bodykit pieces can be identified by logos (sometimes with serial numbers) that are mounted to the inside of the components. Supposedly the Air scoop is an exception to this. There has been some discussion surrounding the possibility that replica's are being made and then logos applied to them. If in doubt, try to see does your logo look old? they stopped making this stuff more than 10 years ago!

What's the story with the rear lights though????

Myself and tricky Ricky saw one of those grille things at JAE and it looks (in my opinion) as bad in real life as the pic makes it look. Shame 'cause the rest of the car looks mint. I wonder how many times it says 'Toms' around the whole car :laugh:

The Louvre is a traditional Tom's piece from their Rev1/2 days. Personally it doesn't do anything for me but I admire the detail that he's gone to to recreate such an iconic car (IMO).

Wierd ... most, if not everything else, that Toms do for the SW20 looks good. I/we thought this was an eBay type mod if you know what I mean, rather than something from a proper tuning house. Each to their own though. Pic of the JAE one

<http://i797.photobucket.com/albums/yy254/markspence/JAE2010/DSC01741.jpg>

I def agree that the standrd of detail and devotion to the Toms brand is amazing.

Skinny (MR2OC mod and registered on here) is currently in Malaysia working. Literally around the corner from his office is a Toms store. I think he is planning to have a chat before returning to England :) There are plenty of people pledging their undying love for him on MR2OC as you might imagine :laugh:

Good spot Spanky (KC+1). IMO Tom's kits look better on light coloured cars (or maybe in person). Some of the design ideas are questionable but they're nearly 20 years old! I'm not sure if they continued with the louvres on their Rev3+ cars??

As far as I know, Toms is a racing type tuner so perhaps the rear grille is a functional add on to protect the lights. That said the bumper kind of does that.

Other than the grille I like it a lot and I'm not really one for kits B)

Its amazing what a search on Google brings you!

Hi peeps, im James... I am the owner of the grey TOM'S T020 above. It took 3 years to get it where it is now.

I must admit that the fella above who put the pictures of my car up and called it a replica kind of broke me a bit. Replica to me is another word for fake. All parts are genuine therefore making it a genuine T020. No proper hardship either way. Its sat on a driveway for the winter as i roll around in 500 worth of diesel car... pure magic lol.

no hes right as long as your using genuine tom's parts then it makes it a Toms t020.

unlike the trd2000gt these were never produced in the tom's factory, they basically did a tuning package and called it a T020. i guess if you want to be picky there was never actually a genuine tom's t020 unless you get the actual one from the tuning catalog because even using every part they had in the T020 line up wouldn't make it the genuine car.

saying that i think as long as you using genuine parts because like him i hate replica stuff your building a true Tom's equipped car. i'm building basically exactly the same car but a rev 3 version in white, but with a few subtle differences, like dep2 pro exhaust instead of the barrell because it wouldn't cope with the power i plan on making. also i'm using 18" gram light 57 wheels to cover the huge disks compaired to the tom's c3 wheels. but like this one all parts are genuine and tom's i understand your flustation when people say its a replica. like you its taken me about 2 years to find all the parts just need to finish the car. I even bought an mr2 just for the genuinie toms rear bumper and sideskirts with fins then sold it on after they'd been removed. lol nuts or what

Wanted to ask, with your sideskirts do you have the authentic rubber door seals provided with the skirts? i found a set and its the only set i've ever seen.

Hi sorry for the late reply. I appreciate your comments that emphasise what my car really is, i cant wait to drive it when the weather is warmer. Answering your question... indeed yes the skirts have the original rubber strip that allows good seating along the door sill. So that will make two of us. I just need to get the grill fitted properly using fabricated brackets etc for when i attend shows next year. I started it the other day to find it hunts on idle and takes ages to balance itself to a steady idle. If i turn the lights on or disconnect the boost pressure vacuum hose from the engine or from a boost gauge it idles just fine... any ideas people?

Thanks in advance... James ah thats cool. i've got one of the rev 3 rear grills as well but not 100% if i want to fit it or not, profer it without to be honest.

your car still got the afm fitted? if so it just stabalises the idle with a vaccum leak then?

when did it start doing this? has it been sat around a while?

give me an email at sales@tbdevelopments.com and i'll try and talk you through this problem if we can find out what it is :)

Oh i thought you meant a rev3 rear louvre. Maybe they didnt exist. My mistake.

I thought I had seen a rev3 with the mesh inner and a louvre over the top. From memory it looked a bit 'over the top'. May have just been a custom one off that someone made up. It's not really something you see often that's for sure.

no thats right. they are just a piece that sits over the top of the original centre panel. again this is why i don't really like the rev 3 version because like you say it looks just stuck on.

original ones also sit proud of the surface to make it look even more additional.

I'm not sure if it's my pc but some of your photos aren't loading up. So I will post these Tom's carbon air intakes here. I found the photos on an Australian MR2 site.

my friend rich used to have one of those for his n/a there n/a fitment only.

that one is missing the tom's outter foam covering on the filter so its just got the metal support mesh you can see there

This is the item description:

Product: TOMS Racing Carbon Fibre intake system

Details: Works ONLY on Gen3 3SGE motor (late model N/A without the VVT-i). Truly a work of art, the built and quality is unbeatable on this one. You will need to purchase a new filter as the original TOMS sponge filter is destroyed

Price: $550 AUS

Stop with the photos man, I am loving your car to much already :) .

What is the colour code of the car, is it an original colour.

Take some photos of your engine bay, it could probably be adapted

I think it's fair to say that it is one of the nicest mr2s i have ever seen.. ;) really is a work of art. Curious about the colour too?

You need to do a vid like that black one on youtube!

I thought i chucked a reply in there last night but didnt go through it seems.

It would have been completely rude not to go for a Toyota colour so i chose off the chart an '04 grey which im told by an IMOCer looks like a colour used on the MR2 MK3.

Its an awesome colour, when the sun is back and i got this baby back on the road ill take some photos of it then at the angles where it shimmers a light bronze.

As for the video, i keep thinking that, but i dont have any friends that would really wanna make that kind of effort to do film for me. ill have to teach the misses. any decent free video editing software i can use thats out there?

cheers

A few more reference links posted by cardhore on imoc.

I think all of the parts may be mentioned here already but still good to have them here as well...

235ps and 255 n/m of torque would of love to of seen that in a road going mr2, my question is how did they manage to get 300bhp out of the 3sge in 1992 for the carina in the btcc?

300bhp is alot from a 3sge, highest i've ever seen was 260 from a trd but that rev'd to 11,000rpm

Only thing i can think of was wild cams and stupid ignition advance from race fuel.

Anyone know what kind of fuel they were running?
