Hey guys, I just joined the forum. Here are pics of my deuces:

My first MR2. It's N/A with automatic trans. It was my daily before I joined the military. It was my work horse, and I drove it to its limits every time I got in the driver's seat.

Monkeys... You can't trust em.

Doin' work.

My parents' house... We like cars.

This is my '91 MR2 Turbo. I call it the Urbo because someone tried stealing the "Turbo" badge off the trunk, but they only got the "T" off before they gave up. So now it just says "urbo". I bought this car as a project. It has had an extremely hard life. The previous owners took horrible care of it, and the whole thing is a complete learning experience because I knew absolutely nothing about turbo cars when I bought it. The car had been wrecked, stolen, flooded... You name it, and it has probably happened to this car at some point in its life. The project is put on hold because I'm in Japan, but when I get back home, the seemingly endless work will continue.

This is where I found it, where it had been sitting for about 2 years:

I am blacking out EVERYTHING.

Trailer'd by my brother's bagged F-150. He's a sheet metal fabricator and took it home to do some work on the front where it had been wrecked and not repaired properly. The frame is a little tweaked and will need straightening in the future.

My MK1 Super Edition:

If you are a member of the MR2OC (www.mr2oc.com), you can read the story about how I acquired the Super Edition. It was a long process lol. Here's the link to my thread:

Where I found it... sitting in the weeds at a race track.

nice collection you have.

other than the twos, you seem to have a soft spot for older muscle (at least two mustangs in one pic.

I love the look of the lowered F150, makes a difference as most americans raise the suspension for hte monster truck look. The 150 isn't available over here so for those that don't know, it has probably been lowered by about 12 inches or more
